Wally's House is a Child Abuse Intervention Center (CAIC)

What is a CAIC? A CAIC provides a community based, collaborative, child-focused response to child abuse. Its primary focus is the reduction of trauma to the child. The secondary focus is to provide improved investigative outcomes in Child Abuse cases.

CORE SERVICES INCLUDE

- ◆ Providing a Child Focused Setting
- ◆ Forensic Interviewing

Wally's House also provides Prevention Education to all ages.

Adult Workshops - Darkness 2 Light trainings.

Teen Education - for Prevention, as well as providing hands-on materials which educate about recognition and prevention of abuse.

Wally's House has been privileged to have a commercially zoned building provided and remodeled by a local family in service to the child abuse intervention efforts – from interview room with recording equipment and the ability for law enforcement officials to unobtrusively observe the interviews, to a fully functional treatment room used to collect evidence necessary to successfully prosecute offenders and protect the children against future abuse from these individuals. The child-friendly, warm environment at Wally's House is a huge improvement over the sterile, somewhat-public facilities of its previous location.

Wally's House is comprised of a dedicated group of volunteer board members and a wonderfully energetic executive director.

The center is operated with public funding, (government grants) and private funding from fundraising activities and individual donations.

YOU CAN HELP

Physical and sexual abuse of children is a grim reality in the US today. The sobering statistics show that approximately three million children report to be victims of abuse or neglect annually. One of four girls and one of six boys will be sexually abused by the age of 16. In Curry County, these child victims are served by Wally's House which strives to make sure that their well-being gets top priority. We help abused children going through the judicial process by providing a warm child focused setting where they can be interviewed; receive medical exams to help criminal investigations, and testify before the grand jury. Doing all this under one roof spares the child the fear and trauma often associate with being shuffled through police stations, doctors offices and courtrooms.
